Paul Neumann is assisting the prosecution and G. A. Davis defending.

Evading a Rule.

A good joke was told a BULLETIN man today, by a late arrival from Kauai, about a little episode which occurred on that island. One of the plantation managers has a bulletin posted up at his wharf, warning all steamers against landing liquor of any kind and under any circumstances. It seems that a large case containing, among other things, some bottles of wine, sent to the aforesaid manager himself from Scotland, arrived by steamer two weeks ago.

The purser refused to break the rules and regulations posted, so took the case back to Honolulu. A second time it made the trip and again the purser proved obdurate. At last a compromise was effected and the case was put ashore upon its third voyage up, at a landing some twelve miles from the plantation. A horse and wagon finally conveyed it to its destination.
